The Radisson Collection Hotel Santa Sofia Milan is strategically located at the intersection of Via Santa Sofia and Corso Italia, halfway between Piazza Duomo and Navigli.

Studio Marco Piva, particularly attentive to the morphology of buildings and their context, interpreted the hotel building in an architectural and interior design language of “urban style”: that combined the concepts of “business”, “urban”, and “loft”. The rooms, like small urban lofts, have large windows and black frames to provide greater brightness and permeability to the bathroom and sleeping area, and soft dark curtains that can be used to create privacy between the two spaces.

The materials used interpret the lifestyle of a five-star luxury hotel and mixing with a blue-toned color palette with red accents and a base of shades of gray. A touch with a unique and special design for the new contemporary hospitality.
